

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

SPECIAL PROCEEDINGS IN THE COURTS, NEW YORK COURTS. By J. NEWTON FIERO, Svo., pp. 12, 75c. Albany: Matthew Bender & Co.

The first work issued by the new law book publishing house recently established by Mr. Bender is one of the most useful treatises for the busy lawyer that has lately appeared. The latest publication on the subject of Special Proceedings was made more than twenty years ago. In the meantime the new Code of Civil Procedure, with its many modifications of the law on the subject, has gone into effect, and the other changes by statutory enactment and by adjudication have been in sufficient numbers to demand their early compilation and digestion. Probably the practice in several of the proceedings which are excluded from the category of "actions" and are covered by the convenient designation of "special proceedings" are less generally understood and settled than almost any other phase of legal procedure.

The remedy by mandamus, for instance, may be taken as an excellent illustration of this, as well as a test of the care and thoroughness with which Mr. Fiero has done his work.

The confusion that arises in the proceedings to obtain injunctions against the Board of Police recently in the matter of the fifth election inspector will be removed when it is realized that it is REALLY ENCYCLOPEDIC IN CHARACTER, AND AN ILLUSTRATIVE PRACTICAL COMMENTARY rather than a mere book of travel. Comprehensive in every sense, it is a formidable undertaking to read it at a stretch, giving it the attention it deserves. Everywhere it is replete with information and illustrations. Each chapter concentrates a flood of light on the localities it describes.
